‘Parentability’: Reimagining social care services with disabled parents and professionals

A one day conference showcasing this groundbreaking co-production research project. For the first time disabled parents, social work academics and professionals have collaborated to design a radical re-imagining of how adults’ and children’s social care might deliver holistic services which value the needs, assets and rights of the whole family.

This conference is aimed at health and social care professionals, academics and policy makers. Speakers include: Professor Emily Munro and Dr Maryam Zonouzi
